

SOUL LIGHT - Thirty

THE “REAL WORLD” IS UNREAL

Many people when leaving Heartland exclaim “ Well, it’s back to “the real world” for me now”. More likely, it’s back to the unreal world.

The unreal world is a place where “the news” is the acknowledged source of truth. In the real world, the source is found inside.

The unreal world is a place where “work” brings in the abundance that makes life bearable. In the real world, it’s life that shares its abundance, thus making work pleasurable.

In the unreal world love is a tradeable commodity that is invariably sold to the highest bidder. In the real world it’s given away.

The unreal world teaches that hard work helps you achieve success. The real world simply tells you that if you’re here you’re already successful.

In the unreal world that success is measured by the size of the house, the cost of the car and a thousand other facades. In the real world it’s measured by the peace in your heart.

In the unreal world death is feared. In the real world it’s unknown.

The unreal world society is held together by a thousand laws and ten thousand legislative rules. In the real world society is held together by simple respect and honour.

The spiritual backbone of the unreal world offers differing religions, creeds, gods, beliefs and rituals. The spiritual backbone of the real world offers love and oneness.

In the unreal world people are expected to demean their own value and easily do. In the real world there are no values, no comparisons possible. Just the divine.

We can separate ourselves from the unreal world, if only for a short while, for the precise reason that it is unreal. Being unreal we can walk away from it. Recognising this truth can be enough to wake us up from our unreal dream and ensure that next time we walk away from that madcap unreal world for a few days we don’t walk back into it!

Instead we can choose to stay in the real world. We cannot separate ourselves from the real world for that is who and what we are.

Next time you find yourself suffering from the insanity of society, simply remember who you are. Come back to Source. You are Love. You are Peace. You are Joy. You are Bliss. You are Eternal. You are Immortal. You are the Light of the world. You are the Word made flesh. You are Infinite Spirit!

Love and Blessings,

Les
